

Elon Musk fires Twitter's general counsel for suppression of Hunter Biden story

Elon Musk fired Twitter's general counsel Tuesday following revelations about his alleged role in suppressing the Hunter Biden laptop story on the platform.

Musk claimed that James Baker, the former deputy general counsel for the social media platform, gave "unconvincing" answers when questioned about his role in the suppression of the story.

"In light of concerns about Baker's possible role in suppression of information important to the public dialogue, he was exited from Twitter today," the Tesla and SpaceX CEO tweeted.
