

Kansas City shooting: Police say dispute led to Super Bowl celebration shooting

Police in Kansas City say an argument between several people that escalated led to a shooting that killed one and injured 22 others after a Super Bowl victory parade.

The deceased victim was identified as Lisa Lopez-Galvan, 43, a local DJ.

Nine children are among the wounded and they are all expected to recover.

Police said on Thursday three suspects were taken into custody shortly after the shootings. Two of them are aged under 18.

“This appeared to be a dispute between several people that ended in gunfire,” Kansas City Police Chief Stacey Graves told reporters on Thursday.
