

Nord Stream explosions caused by ‘gross sabotage’, says Swedish prosecutor

The explosions that caused significant damage to the Nord Stream pipelines near the Danish island of Bornholm in late September were the result of “gross sabotage,” Swedish prosecutors confirmed.

“Analyses that have now been carried out show traces of explosives on several of the foreign objects that were found,” public prosecutor Mats Ljungqvist, who is in charge of the ongoing preliminary investigation into the explosions, said in a statement Friday.

There are no indications of who is to blame for the incident at this time, and the investigation is ongoing.
