Poland captures Russian spy

'The suspect conducted surveillance of military facilities and seaports,' Polish Interior Minister Mariusz Kamiński says.

Poland's intelligence services have detained a man accused of spying for Russia, Interior Minister Mariusz Kamiński said Monday.

"The suspect conducted surveillance of military facilities and seaports," Kamiński said. "He was systematically paid by the Russians."

European intelligence services have cracked down on Russian interference since the start of Moscow's full-scale invasion of Ukraine in 2022, and hundreds of suspected Russian spies have been expelled from the Continent.
