

Weekly Update by Mark Armstrong - 1 January 2021

Greetings from Tyler,

It seems every day that goes by contains more false information that eventually will have to be straightened out. But will it ever be? The mountain of lies, accepted and repeated by nearly every media outlet just keeps growing. There's now so much that needs to be fixed, we're wondering whether it will ever happen, or will we just have to live in a never-ending whirlwind of deception for the rest of our lives.

It's not easy to know where to start. They've been cramming the man-made global warming scam down everybody's throats since they changed their minds about the "Coming Ice Age" in the 1980s. We were supposed to have been incinerated, or starved to death in our feeble efforts to flee the wrath of Al Gore. Universities lost their reputations, and scientists had to go into hiding after getting caught altering data designed to scare everybody half to death. (East Anglia University, Climate Research Unit, Phil Jones, Michael Mann, "hockey stick").

But no, the whole thing was a misunderstanding, the media concluded. The claim is that we're in an "existential climate crisis." What we're still doing here, after decades of being told we're all going to have to flee unsurvivable heat, is anybody's guess. But never fear, the "president elect's" teleprompter says that we must treat global warming the same way they've treated COVID-19! What exactly that means is not immediately clear. But we all know that Americans have been subjected to the heavy-handedness of governors who issue un-Constitutional orders on the basis of emergency powers. Governor Newsom in California has hobbled and bankrupted so many that he is the subject of a recall effort, and it's gaining support.

The news-breaks sound just like last month, and the month before. They've got record COVID-19 infections, record hospitalizations, record death tolls, just like they've had for every day, week and month since early last year. Meanwhile we find out that everything from heart-attacks to gunshot wounds to motorcycle accidents are being counted. We find out that the national death toll numbers from 2020 are no different than they were in 2019. How can that be, with record deaths from something unknown one year ago?

Everyone is free to believe what they want and do as they please for at least another couple of weeks. Then choices, and possibly freedom itself may be the stuff of bygone daydreams. It turns out that corporations, not government, are the most stern of COVID-19 mandate enforcers. We're "lucky" that some state powers have allowed any businesses to stay open. Let their employees wear masks and gloves. But it would be nice to be able to get an oil change without the COVID lecture!

If you're sick to death of the whole thing, better not turn on the radio or any device for that matter. If you thought things were a little scary six or eight months ago, they've ramped it right up. Every radio break tells nightmare stories. Any explanation or disputation gets banned from social media. If you don't agree to be in a panic, tell no one. Otherwise, there will be consequences. Isn't freedom great?

The United States has lost freedom as we knew it. This time last year, they'd have thought you were out to rob the CVS pharmacy. Suddenly, you're doing the right thing by following the latest protocol. Businesses in New York, New Jersey and California daring to serve the public and make a living have been visited by police and "health officials," had their doors blocked by police, or been raided, like a hair salon in California was. "Drop the clippers or else!" The proprietor said it was like a drug bust. There went freedom.

We've learned the hard way that the news media HATES the United States, hates freedom, and will call us cultists, racists, selfish, there is no end to the accusations and epithets they apply to anyone who doesn't willingly relinquish their freedom immediately. We must recognize the EXPERTS, even when they vacillate and change their minds, know better than us and have our best interests at heart.

As Victor Davis Hanson said a couple months ago, "They are trying to save us by stopping us living." But those were the good ole days. It's much worse now, and new records are set every moment. At least it's reassuring to know the national death toll is no worse than it ever was. There must be some explanation. Or are we hip-deep in an unmentionable substance?

Everybody dies sooner or later. The question is, then what? You always here about the dear departed looking down and being proud, or being present at critical moments. It seems our society has universally embraced the idea that dead relatives are “looking down.” Nobody seems to look forward to the time that they’ll be “looking down.” We’re not sure why not. It sounds like a comfortable existence.

No, the truth is what God tells us in His Word. The dead know not anything. And they won’t until the resurrection. We don’t know how going to heaven and the resurrection don’t conflict, but nobody seems bothered about the contradiction. There is no coherent explanation. But what’s new?

We’ve been extremely concerned about the impending loss of freedom, which is being accomplished by deceit of all kinds, and has implications for everybody on earth. Those who would rule over us are warning that extreme measures will be necessary to save our lives from the “existential crises” they’ve invented or hyped beyond reason. The time for debate is OVER, they tell us. We’re not qualified to weigh in, only to obey their scientifically created mandates! It’s for our own good, they say!

We know that the understanding and realization that the United States and the western nations are decedents of Israel is not a necessity for salvation. But it sure does explain everything. Captivity is at the door, whether or not we realize it. Though not a linchpin of salvation, it would be nice if we didn’t have to experience the blight of captivity after having enjoyed Divinely ordained freedom. We’re about to find out whether we continue in freedom or fall under captivity. The media has already celebrated our impending captivity. Hopefully they’ll be disappointed. They’re not God, after all.

Mark

Source: <http://www.intercontinentalcog.org/fridayupdates.php>

[Disclaimer]