

Weekly Update by Mark Armstrong

- 3 June 2022

Greetings from Tyler,

Justice is fallen in the streets. I guess you heard about the acquittal in what looked like a slam-dunk case. It has political overtones, but it threatened to answer most of the questions that were obvious to those watching. If it had gone the other way, it would have been fun to see how the mainstream handled it. If the truth ever spills in to the mainstream we're going to find out a litany of things that we already knew but the mainstream will never report. Is that it? All these years of investigations and the only case brought goes down in flames? Oh there's more, lots more. We're just wondering if any of it will ever see the light of day. So far it looks like the goon squad may get away with what they did. They used the power of government and some agencies in particular to carry out operations against their perceived enemies. Will it ever get straightened out? It's looking doubtful.

We've been grappling with what to do with the next WATCH magazine cover. No, I'm not going to give it away. But it's looking like the government can do whatever they want to beat down and impoverish the citizens, and nothing is their fault. It's Putin's fault. The gas prices? Yep, Putin. Food shortages? They've been predicted, now it looks like all the stops will be pulled out to make that come true. Oh, that's the corporations. Corporations that are determined to play government ball at any cost.

We're drowning in crises. Well, crises to us anyway. The politicians are strutting around like they're saving the planet. Gas has gone over budget, way over. Food is following suit, and we haven't seen anything yet. That will be Putin's fault too, wait and see. The only silver lining is that America-haters have to buy gas and groceries too. They're going to react when they figure out they've been slapped back a peg or two. They'll probably get some government handout to ease the pain. Maybe their student debt will be canceled. Yeah, the people who work can pick that up. The government is spewing money as fast as they can print it, in spite of roaring inflation. But act like they don't have a clue.

You can't have missed the monumental amount of military aid for Ukraine. So what's the goal? There is no plan? You mean... Who can stand it? Apparently they're cleared to make life miserable for citizens, and they couldn't be any happier. Who's they? They're at the microphones telling us how proud they are. You can't miss them. You'd think Ukraine was attached to government somehow. You'd be right. The same lame-brains are trying to put us all back in masks, those that ever wore them. The cancellation of the "mandate" for airlines is being appealed. Never mind that Europe has canceled theirs. Since when have the nations of Europe ever been a model for us? We're not who we thought we were, not since the pretender and his handlers started calling the shots. Obama is so jealous? No, Obama is taking the stairs two, maybe three at a time. He had to pretend to be on our side. The pretender doesn't.

Not to alarm you, but a Russian TV show is talking about how easy it would be to take out the eastern seaboard of the United States. Putin apparently is getting treated for some ailment, maybe cancer. It probably wouldn't pay to play chicken with him, having nothing to lose and all. That would spell tribulation all right, and it's the last thing we're rooting for. Pray that we get through this intact, and emerge as the nation we were intended to be. Sounds like a long shot, but it is our hope.

Mark

---

Source: <http://www.intercontinentalcog.org/fridayupdates.php>

[Disclaimer]