

Weekly Update by Mark Armstrong - 6 November 2020

6 November 2020

Greetings from Tyler,

Our worst fears are playing out in real-time. There are a lot of things we don't know yet. Who do we trust? We've seen corruption in the media, corruption in Federal agencies, and now there is apparent corruption in the electoral system. So we're waiting with bated breath to see what the media reports? When have they shown any honesty over recent years? They're behind the idiocy we've had to endure for the past four years. The "dossier" was a fraud, and had to be proven so at a cost of tens of millions of dollars, but there is still no admission from the mainstream media. They're still wearing their haughty faces, sneering at the very suggestion that ANYONE still loves America as founded.

There's one thing you can take to the bank. Regardless of how the contested Presidential election finally turns out, there will be many, perhaps half of the country, who will not accept the result no matter which way it ends up.

If there's any silver lining to this incredible mess, it is that the communist's plans to upend the nation with a bunch of destructive Green New Deal foolishness will not succeed based on House and Senate results, should they turn out to be accurate. Worst case is we'll be back to defense, praying that their plans to return the United States to a path of "globalism," replete with income redistribution and environmentalist radicalism will never come to fruition.

Should fraud be proven, maybe things will take another direction. But it seems that everyone is waiting on a demonstrably corrupt media to tell us what the deal is. That's a problem.

Sorry to beat this to a pulp, but all of this is brought to you courtesy of COVID-19. It was used as justification for the "mail-in election." The media is going to keep panic alive a bit longer, if for no other reason than to cover their tracks. They're reporting new records TODAY, and of course hyping their fraudulent "death count." Maybe we'd be happier if we had some faith in their reporting. But they've made that impossible, awkwardly pretending to believe their own lies on national television.

We know beyond any doubt that the experts' predictions and polls were pure fiction. Are we to believe those had no effect on the outcome? We've watched the mainstream liars all but tear up over "attempts to subvert our democracy," when THEY were in fact the worst offenders. They've led the American public down one rabbit hole after another, trying to make us all believe things that were not true. It's been a consistent form of brainwashing, practiced by the mainstream media organizations relentlessly. Now we're being asked to believe it worked.

We can be thankful that we live in a beautiful and still somewhat free nation. As wrapped up in our national survival and prosperity as we may be, we at least have the unique knowledge that our greatest hope lies in being citizens of God's Kingdom. May we all remember what true HOPE is all about. And if it be possible, for the sake of our progeny, that the United States should survive in the meantime.

Mark
