Greetings from Tyler,

Where are the Clinton's when Haiti needs them? If you read all the woke nonsense they wrote about all they were doing for Haiti, maybe you'd realize what good work they did. It was a "partnership to catalyze long-term development." A lot of good that did. The president has resigned from a safe distance, and few photos are coming out of Haiti. You don't want to see them. They're saving us from global warming, or they were. All the kindergarten talk you'd expect, like they were turning Haiti into some woke paradise. We're seeing how that works out. The scenes would work for some terrifying end of the world movie. Maybe the Clintons should go down there and straighten things out, maybe check on their children's center.

The Iranians are promising heavy retribution for the death of their general in Syria. They know good and well that Israel has carried out numerous bombing raids in Syria, what was their beloved general doing there? I wonder. But now we're on a countdown of sorts, at least that's what's on the news. They say Iran is about to respond forcefully to the killing of their general. Talk is cheap. If something major is about to happen, Israel probably already knows about it and will prevent it. If Iran gets away with some monumental attack against Israel, it may be the start of something big.

It spoke volumes when Biden decided to celebrate trannies for Easter. Where do you even start? The Easter crowd is not amused that the holiday was used to promote an abomination. Must everything be desecrated? They're all wrong. They call Easter the holiest day of the year, but people who believe that are a little miffed that it's been used to promote transsexualism. Get used to it.

The worry is that we're on the brink of WWIII. Anthony Blinken has announced that Ukraine is going to try to join NATO. That may spell trouble for the whole world. They're going to push Putin, promising to put foreign soldiers into the fray? Who wants WWIII?

Wherever you look, wars have broken out. Iran, formerly broke, is causing all manner of mayhem across the Middle East. Gaza is a pile of broken concrete, and they're still acting like it's a war they can win. It seems the problems must be made all but insurmountable just in case Trump gets elected. Nobody's sure that the problems that have overtaken us can even be solved in four years, but Trump says he'll do it.

It looks like the lawfare cases they have lined up may blow up in their faces. But they'll do or say anything to prevent another Trump presidency. Maybe they'd rather die, of embarrassment.
