

Weekly Update by Mark Armstrong

- December 29, 2023

Greetings from Tyler,

The pretender is signaling that the U. S. may be “dragged into war with Russia” if Ukraine should lose the war. That sounds pretty bleak. Apparently WW III is not too high a price. Knowing as everyone does now, that there is evidence that payouts have been made, what will be the price of saving the pretender? Maybe that price is currently being paid. May it not get worse.

The scenes from the border cannot be watched with a straight face. They have no idea how to fix it! Gregg Abbot piloted a law through the Texas Legislature that allows law enforcement to arrest illegal aliens. But it doesn't take effect until March, and the administration promises to sue over it. The Biden doctrine seems to be, if Trump did it, it must be overturned. The Paris Climate Accord?

It is clear that all the bad guys on earth know this is the time to act up. The Houthis are shooting at cargo vessels in the Red Sea. The U. S. has only tacitly responded. We're told that nothing happens without Iranian approval. Lindsay Graham (long categorized as a war-monger) says it's time to blow Iran off the map. They're seen as largely responsible for the current Israeli war in Gaza, though they claim to have known nothing about it. But the munitions came mostly from Iran.

There is more about to break on the details of corruption. You won't find a full explanation here, except from an overview. It wouldn't do any good to lead the cheering section on impeachment. If you look at who is waiting in the wings, you almost hope it doesn't happen. But then again, it may turn out to be inevitable.

You have to be careful about turning any of several news channels. They'll bring on some “expert” you've never seen before to say something designed to make you furious. More often than not, they don't know what they're talking about. It's getting to be impossible to watch anyone spouting the left's point of view. Even Bill Maher is sick of it. He seems to be pushing back against the left's apparent knee jerk reaction to demonstrate on behalf of the terrorists.

Don't get me started, but there seems to be an inherent conflict. The left reflexively supports the cause of the "downtrodden." How downtrodden are they when they spend every dime on tunnels and rockets in the vain hope that they can overcome Israel? If an accounting is ever done, I wouldn't be surprised to find out that U. S. aid has been used in the furtherance of terrorism. They are like nothing you've ever encountered in civilized society. Consumed by hatred. Nobody talks about it very much, but they can't wait to die in the furtherance of their cause. They think they'll go to Paradise, which is a long way from Gaza. You'll have to find out about the rest of their reward elsewhere. But it tells you something. They're not afraid to die. They think they'll be rewarded for their atrocities. Wouldn't you like to be there when they find out what's up?

We don't know if the pretender will get us into a world war. He probably would given the time. But time is running out. If it comes to impeachment, the party won't let it happen, unless... Maybe news will surface that gives them no choice, but even then they'd hate to have it happen. We don't know if the pretender will get to the finish line or not. What will the world look like? What will the United States look like this time next year?

This nation was no accident. Some bad things happened along the way, no doubt. But God decreed the existence of the United States long ago. It's been the shining light of freedom to the rest of the world as long as we've been alive. But somebody is pushing our luck.

Mark