

Weekly Update by Mark Armstrong

Greetings from Tyler,

Things are getting complicated. Putin suspends Russia's "participation" in the New START. It does seem that the U. S. is in a proxy war with Russia, where all the stops have not yet been pulled out. Putin has called for the UN to investigate the blown up pipeline known as the Nord Stream 2. All kinds of U. S. officials have gone on the record, just short of saying that "we" did it. The pretender made noises that sounded suspiciously like an admission, after everybody denied it. I'm starting to think the first family wouldn't mind a big conflagration. The news on their international relations is anything but reassuring. Can you even imagine if Donald Trump's sons had been engaging in graft with enemies around the world?

They're saying the derailment in East Palestine, Ohio was the result of seized wheel bearings igniting a fire that caused the plastic pellets it was carrying to combust. Trump went to their town with truckloads of bottled water and provisions. Private-time Pete finally showed up, a day late and a dollar short. Meanwhile the pretender was in Ukraine, embarrassing all who watched the bear hug with Zelensky. How come Ukraine's border is important, but not ours? It's hard to watch.

Now China has a plan for peace. Wouldn't it be something if China is the one to broker peace?

I've got my suspicions about why we're sending all our military gear to Ukraine. Someone is benefiting. Nobody asked us. Maybe the manufacturers of war machines needed to manufacture. Ukraine has been known as a backwater of vast corruption. Somebody ought to add up all the American taxpayer money that's been awarded to Ukraine. Even better, we'd like to know where it ended up.

All the bad guys are on the move. Little rocket man is firing missiles off to show he can. Putin decided it would be a good time to take Ukraine back. China is claiming Taiwan. We've got a couple hundred soldiers stationed there. Not that they're going to stop China. But if something happens it would be a full blown international incident.

Meanwhile they're still preaching global warming, or whatever nonsense they've decided to call it. The American people have to sacrifice, because Al Gore might have a breakdown. Home electricity, gas driven cars, stoves, everything is on the table. We're talking about the PLANET here. Those that want to get us fired up know how to do it now. Fear is the magic bullet. Have you ever seen such fear instilled in the public? Global warming never really caught on, so they rolled out the Covid 19, and it worked! People who bought in can be easily swayed if the right buttons are pushed. Fear is the ticket.

We can't even look at what is transpiring at our southern border. It's the biggest invasion since the Muslims came to Europe. It's worse, because it never stops. A scandal that most "Christians" don't understand is that the Catholics and nearly every big Protestant denomination are up to their ears in resettling "migrants." Maybe they'll come to church. The pews aren't exactly full. But the "Christian" churches are in the black, thanks to government money for resettling migrants. Why isn't this story on the networks? kIt's not only a scandal for the organizations involved. Whose money is it anyway?

It's a good thing we know what to look for. It's not time for WWIII, or what Bible prophecy says will be the end-time events. We've got to see a central European power calling the shots on what everybody is doing, and some figure who's respected (if not revered) giving the orders. For now the U. S. is trying its best to fall into line. We've been embarrassed, dare I say humiliated for all to see. We'll hate to see what transpires in the next two years. Hopefully there will be something to save. But I'm not sure our "leaders" are looking out for our best interests. Sure doesn't look like it.

Mark
