Weekly Update

Greetings from Tyler,

It's just so much easier to avoid what's happening around the world. There is this scene this week in Davos, where the world's "elite" went to congratulate themselves on saving the planet. Al Gore delved into one of the more bizarre performances ever. He used terms I'd never heard before. But those terms, at least some of them, were not invented on the fly. Will we all start talking about "rain bombs" and atmospheric rivers? What about boiling oceans?

The participants seem to delve into self-congratulation, just happy to be in with so many other wealthy people and presumably seeing themselves as the saviors of all mankind. They are talking about earth, aren't they? Mixing unlimited (and unmerited) vanity with all the scare-mongering is not a good look. Maybe they'll realize that when they get home. Meanwhile they intend to frighten everybody into adopting their rules. I guess they never heard of the American Constitution. It must be an impediment to their plans, and they've got to scare us into submission.

Why are representatives of American law enforcement agencies over there? Is it to complain that they are not allowed to "prevent crime?" Crime is off the chart, but they're more interested in monitoring everybody just to make sure nobody's having any success with an unapproved message.

Records are being set at the border. Now it's over 250,000 per month, a full blown invasion. Maybe you've seen some of the reports out of New York where these "immigrants" have trashed entire hotels, at our expense.

The pretender is in such trouble, he may not survive his term in office. But he knows little about it and his lawyers have told him not to ask. He has no regrets. Bet that doesn't last long. Even the mainstream has to report the news eventually, and he's not looking too good. Somebody's going to have to tell him that resignation over mishandling documents would be a lot less painful than what's coming. He castigated Trump for having classified documents, just couldn't believe how irresponsible he'd been. But Trump was the President, which gave him authority over documents. The pretender has had this stuff for years, in the home where his son resides. Uh oh.

California has suffered some of the worst flooding anybody can remember. Nobody remembers 1860, before global warming had been discovered. Maybe that was one of those "rain bombs" that buffoon Al Gore was talking about. But it happened long before the industrial age. It makes you wonder if they have an explanation for that. Doubtful.

Have you noticed that the Kennedy assassination is back in the news? Maybe there's a reason all the documents haven't been released. You don't suppose the "deep state" existed back in the 1960's, or did it? There have been some pretty disturbing revelations. We're waiting to see if anything gets traction.

How many ways is the U. S. going to get ruined by the pretender and his party? It seems as if everything has fallen apart at once. To find out that we're funding these institutions that plan to change life as we know it is disgusting. If they can't scare us into submission, they'll have to figure out how to FORCE us into their vision for the future.

Mark

P. S. On a happier note, we've reached 130,000 this week online, and we've run big ads for WATCH magazine and the Real Jesus. Another one is in the design process featuring only Bible quotes. Who can argue with that? Religious people run around being religious, and have no idea what the "good book" says. Have a great Sabbath.
