

Weekly Update by Mark Armstrong

- May 12, 2023

Greetings from Tyler,

I bet you thought you'd never see Donald Trump getting interrogated by CNN. Obviously, it was a ratings play that CNN desperately needed. But it didn't go well for CNN or the girl asking the questions. Watch it if you can. Reports are circulating that the network ended the town hall nearly a half hour early, and no wonder why. The crowd was extremely vocal in Donald Trump's favor. Can you even imagine the headset chatter while this was taking place? There must have been gnashing of teeth behind the scenes. Now some of the familiar faces are angry. How dare CNN, of all places, give Donald Trump the forum to outwit them and draw laughter at the same time? It was probably one of the biggest audiences for CNN in some time, and Trump made the network and the host look unprepared. The left gets so unabashedly embarrassed that their only retort is to cancel the guy. They obviously can't compete. So they brand Trump's wit a pack of lies, and that's all they've got. I'm having a hard time getting over the fact that he told the female lawyer she wasn't his type during a deposition. That's brash, and wonderful.

You can't escape the border crisis. The government is telling us they've got it under control. Mayorkas is trying to explain through that idiotic grin, but the pictures tell a different story. Last night Governor Gregg Abbott appeared with a story of officers using concertina wire to block the entry of hordes that had already crossed the Rio Grande. Why hasn't this been going on all along? Is there a border there, or not? Reports claim that everybody is getting free cell phones and being released with notices to appear, ten years from now. Meanwhile, where would they like to go? Sending them to New York, Chicago or Detroit turned out to be more than a gimmick. It's a headache for "compassionate" Mayors, but at least they're not in Texas anymore.

But apparently Title 42 (remain in Mexico) has expired, and we have no , border. Here comes South America. What on earth? Let's argue about trannies, shall we?

There have been revelations this week that would lead any sane person to change their identity and try to escape to some unlikely paradise. But it's going to be a slow motion train wreck instead. It's in black and white now, but you wouldn't know anything if dependent on mainstream outlets. Shell corporations all over the place, shuttling payments from one to another before finally reaching their intended destination. Yeah, there's nothing to see here. It'll take forever, and the agencies and corporations will run interference for the duration. We've known things for years that would have changed outcomes, but somehow they never come to fruition. This money for nothin' looks bad, but escape hatches are being mapped out, and who knows what they'll try to make us believe. This should be good.

Meanwhile we're treated like a bunch of imbecilic automatons by those who would inform us. You're probably talking back to your TV too. Who can stand it? These talking heads tell us what to believe and how to look at the devastation being wrought. The pretender shows up with that squint to read some statement, and the mainstream breathes a sigh of relief. Maybe everybody will back off now.

It seems that the mounting evidence may have been underestimated. But who knows? Some sweetheart pleading out of lesser charges, maybe a pardon of all family members. We're already off the charted map, and the powers that be seem to have an agenda. America is being overrun, deceived at all costs and spent into oblivion over global warming. People are starting to get irritated. May America withstand the onslaught of non-sense, and survive to be saved.

Mark